

ABOUT US

The Centre for Marine and Coastal Studies (CEMACS), established in 1991, undertakes research and postgraduate training in marine science and coastal ecosystems. It serves as a platform for integrating the University's expertise to support interdisciplinary studies that address issues affecting marine and coastal environments. Located at Teluk Aling on the northwest coast of Penang Island within Penang National Park, CEMACS works with national and international collaborators and focuses on marine biodiversity and conservation, coastal forest ecosystems, mariculture, and marine mammal ecology.
